From The Pastor

*I am who I am
(Exodus 3:14)*

Jacob and his family all move to Egypt to be with Joseph and settle there. By the beginning of the book of exodus their host have enslaved their descendants and they are cruelly treated. God must set them free if they are to be his people as he promised. Through the long years of slavery, they must wonder if he has forgotten the promise, but God can never do that. The Israelites groaned in their slavery and cried out, and their cry for help because of their slavery went up to God. God heard their groaning and he remembered his covenant with Abraham, with Isaac and with Jacob. So, God looked on the Israelites and was concerned about them (Exodus 2:23-25).

God begins his rescue operation by appearing to Moses in a burning bush at Horeb. He tells him to go to Pharaoh to demand the release of his people. And he reveals a new name to Moses: "I am who I am" (Exodus 3:14).

There are no vowels in Hebrew (YHWH), which makes it hard to know exactly what the word is. Most scholars tend to translate the word as "Yahweh". Which in English would be "I am what I am".

When the word appears in our English versions of the Bible It almost always does so as "Lord" in capital letters. It is a strange name for God to give himself. He seems to be saying that no one name can encapsulate his character. If we want to know who he is, we must watch him act in history on behalf of his people. "I will be what I will be. Do you want to know who I am, Moses? Then watch me; see what I will do in the future. Then you will know what kind of God I am."

The Bible does not just tell the story of God's work of salvation; at times it reveals God's Character. He is a hero from beginning to end. Sometimes we miss the point by asking too quickly,

"What is it saying to me?" A good first question to ask whenever we look at a passage is, "What does this tell me about God?" Very often the application for us will be obvious. The Bible is, above all, a book about God.

As we read our Bibles may we all think first about what it says about Our God and second what it is saying to me. If we do the second question might be answered by the first because God wants us to reflect who he is.
